The impost on farmer's especially undertaking developments on their property eg new houses is huge as there is now a requirement to submit a koala management plan to local councils. As this is a recent requirement it is an expensive process. Resources could be made available to allow this process to be undertaken more easily. Koalas interact with the urban environment and farming and coal developments. There is a huge impost on people and businesses such as WIRES volunteers and vets. There could be a registration process for qualified volunteers and vets implemented and funds provided to "cover" the costs of care and treatment for injured and sick koalas.
