I am writing on the proposed changes of classes as some species have not be downgraded when there care is the same if not easier than subspecies of a lower class ie: angle headed dragon/southern forest dragon on class r1 and Boyd's forest dragon on class r2 and magnificent tree frog going to go off licence while white lipped are staying a1 ,These species are kept and bred in captivity on the same ease of care yet one is a higher class just like many other species and subspecies . I also think the pricing on class 2 licensing and the time it takes to be processed is ridiculous I have heard of people still waiting after 10 weeks even though money has been taken class 2 should be automatic if you have done your 2 years on class 1 . Class 2 should also take into account age of person and not over 2 years consecutive as people have had reptiles for years prior than come back to have to do the 2 years over again I'm sure there are plenty of other things you are working on and thank you for reading my reply thank you
