

To the Panel

Submission to the Biodiversity Legislation Review

Farmers should be responsible for preserving, and maintaining remnant vegetation areas on their property. They should do it on behalf of the community and be paid for this caretaker role.

Vegetation patches should be linked, where possible, by corridors of vegetation as done by Landcare projects. Connectivity of remnant vegetation patches is important for preservation of flora and fauna diversity.

B Phillips.