The Privacy and Personal Information Protection Act 1998 came into effect on 1 July 2000. The Act introduced a set of privacy standards for State Government agencies in managing personal information.

In accordance with the Act, the Heritage Office has developed a privacy management plan. This is placed on the Heritage Office Internet and circulated to all staff.

The plan identifies personal information held by the Heritage Office, obligations of employees, guidelines for the storage and dissemination and procedures for lodging complaints and/or internal reviews.

The Heritage Office has received no applications to access personal information in terms of this legislation during 2003-04.

Risk Management and Insurance

The Heritage Office carries a comprehensive range of insurance cover through the Treasury Managed Fund covering property, public liability, motor vehicle, workers compensation and other contingencies. This cover has few exclusions. The annual premium is paid for the current year and this arrangement of self insurance is reviewed periodically to ensure that it remains adequate. The policy is managed by the GIO.

The office covers no officer's professional liability insurance, but officers are covered by a State indemnity against claims not involving negligence, due to the public service employee status.

The Heritage Office has developed a Business Continuity and Disaster Recovery Plan which is currently under review. As part of this the office has undergone a high level risk assessment and gap analysis to assist it in becoming compliant with the Australian Standard for Information Security Management, AS/NZS 7799.

The Heritage Office has also undergone independent security risk and occupational health and safety assessments. A number of recommendations, including a closed circuit television security system, have been implemented.

Waste Management

The Heritage Office continued to implement measures under its Waste Reduction and Purchasing Plan.

Some of the initiatives being implemented in this plan include: the use of recycled printing and photocopy paper; the expansion of the use of the electronic office; the recycling of all waste paper, cardboard and toner cartridges. Each member of staff has a two-bin system at each desk.

All free publications are available for download on the Internet. This has considerably reduced the need for large printing orders by over 50%. Similarly, e-mail and the intranet have replaced local paper copies of internal policies and manuals.

Government Energy Management

Government agencies are required to establish an energy management plan and to report energy consumption. This requirement is necessary under the Government's Greenhouse Action Plan.

The Heritage Office uses electricity for its office accommodation and fuel for its vehicle fleet.

The Heritage Office relocated to the former King's School in Parramatta in late December 2002. The building underwent an adaptive re-use to make it suitable for use as a modern office, thus effectively recycling an old unusable building and saving considerable resources. Where possible recycled materials were used in the restoration. The building also incorporates the latest energy management technology.

Agencies are also required to report on their energy usage against the Australian Building Greenhouse Rating. Consultants were engaged in June 2004 and results are expected in July 2004.

Consultants were also engaged to provide a study on the embodied energy contained in the building and energy saved by the adaptive re-use of the former Kings School opposed to the construction of a new building. Results of this study will also be available in July 2004.

The office has a pool of two modern and fuel efficient vehicles using unleaded fuel. All vehicles are purchased through the State Contract. The office's total fuel consumption was 6,032 litres.
