INTRODUCTION

Many publications relating to heritage conservation are now available through bookshops and the libraries. Sources of note are the Information Centre and Library of the Department of Urban Affairs and Planning, the State Library of NSW and the Mitchell Library collection, the National Trust and museums operated by the Historic Houses Trust. The Royal Australian Historical Society has a wide-ranging collections.

Many local libraries now have comprehensive local history collections and books on how to conserve old buildings and houses. These enable people to research the history of a heritage item and appropriate methods for its conservation. Other organisations.

If you cannot obtain a title from your library, it may be available from a major collection by inter-library loan or from the publisher. Ask your librarian about this.
